

Alpha Infrastructure Fund - Snapshot

Morningstar Category: Infrastructure - Global
 Inception Date: 1/02/2012

Fund and Market Commentary

The S&P Global Infrastructure benchmark rose 1.65% in July with the Alpha Infrastructure fund underperforming the benchmark. The Fund has so far gathered limited return history and therefore no comment can be made about its long-term performance

Global equity markets were mixed over July. United States (US) equities continued to rally backed by solid economic data, with the Dow Jones and S&P 500 indices ending the month 2.54% and 1.93% higher respectively. The US economy grew at an annualized 2.6% in the June quarter. Non-farm payrolls increased by 209,000 in June while the unemployment fell 0.1% to 4.3% in July. In spite of the economy being close to full employment, wage growth remained sluggish lowering discretionary spending power. The Headline inflation rate published in July was 1.7% year-on-year, gradually declining over the past months. The modest inflation rate is becoming an increasing concern to the Federal Reserve (FED) given their intentions to raise the policy rate further.

European markets were mostly in the black as the economy continues to gradually improve, while the inflation rate is still below the European Central Bank's (ECB) target rate of 2% at 1.3% year-on-year in July. In the Eurozone, industrial production in the region grew at 2.6% over June, being stronger than expected, supported by robust results in Germany, France, Italy and Spain. In contrast, industrial production in the UK was softer at 0.3% in June. The UK's FTSE 100 index rose by 0.81% and Italy's MIB index gained 4.39%, while Germany's DAX fell 1.68% over July. Asian markets were mixed with China's Shanghai Composite up by 2.52%, the Hong Kong Hang Seng Index jumping 6.05%, while Japan's Nikkei 225 index fell 0.54%.

Considering the prospects for assets beyond short-term volatility, our preference is to take a longer term approach to the markets. This does not mean we are not actively managing the Fund. To the contrary, the structure of our Fund is always reflective of our current assessment of market risk. In structuring the Fund, Alpha Fund Managers seek to select high quality managers and blend these managers to create portfolios that can achieve consistent, absolute and relative performances, irrespective of where we are in the market cycle.

About Alpha Fund Managers

Alpha Fund Managers' investment philosophy is based on the premise that there are particular investment managers that have the ability to consistently generate "alpha" over the medium to long-term, and through all financial market cycles irrespective of any style bias (growth vs. value, large cap vs. small cap, etc.). "Alpha" in this context is defined as an investment manager's unique ability to select a portfolio of securities that differs from and outperforms its benchmark on a risk-adjusted basis. In other words, it is an investment manager's ability to beat the index. Alpha Fund Managers' investment process is based on a balanced approach to quantitative and qualitative research and analysis techniques to assess and select the underlying investment managers in each Alpha Fund Series fund. Alpha Fund Managers seek to add value by selecting investment managers who demonstrate a high-level of investment conviction, unique investment processes and a proven record in managing risk and generating long-term "alpha" over full market cycle. Alpha Fund Managers then blend these managers to create portfolios that can achieve consistent, absolute and relative performances, irrespective of where we are in the market cycle.
